▶ Murdoch and Hunt's Encyclopedia of Irish Law

For over thirty years, Murdoch and Hunt has been the gold standard in legal reference. Indeed, the related book carries the distinction of being the only Irish legal reference book ever mentioned in a Supreme Court judgment.

This service is designed primarily for busy practitioners who want an aide memoire or an introduction to an area of law with which they are not immediately familiar, and which will either fulfil their needs there and then or point the correct direction for further information. An example is '[Rest]. A grant caeterorum is a grant of representation in respect of the rest of the property of a deceased made to the person so entitled, where a grant of part only of the estate (save and except) has already been made. See PROBATE.'

Murdoch and Hunt's Encyclopedia of Irish Law is fully interactive, inter-linked and searchable — making it the ideal starting point for legal research. Moreover, all definitions are regularly reviewed and updated to take stock of legal developments, including both case law and legislation.

▶ Irish Property Law

Irish Property Law provides a wide range of resources for practitioners in this area, including the full range of Irish Conveyancing Precedents (Laffoy), as well as access to a wealth of content from subject expert Professor JCW Wylie. This includes his seminal books as well as his monthly Irish Property Law Update of which he has written over 100. Designed with practitioners in mind, this update provides you with consolidated monthly case reports, practice guidelines and other useful insights.
